Interesting News Notes From Many Sources

On Thursday, March 24, the electors of Carmel School District (Carmel Valley) will vote on the question of issuing bonds of the $2000 for erecting and furnishing a new building.

County Assessor Geo. Goold has begun the work of obtaining valuations and making assessments on real and personal property. B. E. Cahoon has been assigned to work in Carmel.

Those in chargs of the Boys' and Young Men's clubs wish to thank those who so continously show their interest and who appreciate their privilege of assisting in the good work.

That a large portion of Carmel residents are interested in bird study was evidenced by the number who attended the lecture of Prof. H. C. Bryant. The local Audubon society is to be congratulated for its efforts along this line.

Deputy Fish and Game Commissioner Phil Oyer of this district is in receipt of notice of his appointment as supervisor of the commercial fisheries of Monterey and Santa Cruz.

The obliging J. Montague, for several years station agent at Monterey, has been succeeded by R. L. Jones of Lompoc. Montague takes charge of the San Mateo office.

Carmel's local and long-distance telephone service is on a par with the best. At the local headquarters in Carmel at Pine Inn, one may telephone to New York and other Eastern points. This will be a great convenience to visiting business men and tourists.

Says the Pacific Grove Review: "Carmelites don't believe they're getting a square deal from their public service corporations. It costs 'em $600 a month for what they get—or what they're supposed to get."

Mrs. Harrison's Will Filed for Probate

James Hunter Harrison has filed a petition in the Superior Court at Salinas for the probate of the will of Mrs. Margaret Harrison, wife of Wm. Greer Harrison. The estate consists of a one-third interest in Carmel property and insurance, the total valued at approximately $10,000. Mrs. Harrison died in the Fall of 1914.

A Duty to Your Town

Do not fail to vote next Monday. It is a public duty. Two members of the Carmel Sanitary Board are to be elected, as well as a Sanitary District Assessor. Messrs. Fraser and Cherington, whose terms will soon expire, will not be candidates for re-election. You may vote for your own candidate.

There is no lack of candidates for the position of Sanitary District Assessor. Philip Wilson announced his candidacy some time ago, and during the week Miss Helen W. Parkes and H. L. Warren have cast their sombreos in the ring.

Splendid Paper Read Before the Carmel Audubon Society

The Audubon Society of Carmel, which is a branch of the State Audubon Society, is endeavoring to do some helpful, practical work, as is evidenced by the article here presented.

It is original, and the result of much individual observation. The descriptions are from notes taken either in Carmel or in the immediate neighborhood, hence they have local value.

The introduction must of necessity be more or less technical and savor strongly of Chapman, Wheelock and Bailey, our most reliable Western Ornithologists.

Third Installment

A dainty green Lutescent Warbler has come to my window to eat suet nearly every day for six weeks. He seems to be very fond of it. When he has missed visiting us for a day, as he has a few times, I think it is because he has partaken too freely of the suet on the day before.

He is bright olive-green above, veiled on top of head and edge of primaries with gray. Under parts are bright yellowish-green streaked on chest with dull brownish olive, barely discernable with glasses when the bird is near. He has wonderful yellowish eye-rings. When still a light line is noticeable just below the folded wings, which have no bars.

The brightest, most conspicuous Warbler it has been my fortune to see is the beautiful "yellow whirligig," scientifically known as Dendroica Townsendi. I see him often, fluttering and apparently turning somersaults in the terminal head of a pine tree branch, which seems to be a favorite and satisfactory feeding place.

The season's markings for the two sexes and for those of the young are so different and so complicated that they are extremely confusing. The winter male, the bird oftenest noticed, has its black head-piece a little obscured with olive-green; the oblong cheek-patch is black, somewhat obscured with olive green; the throat and chest are yellow, with black markings; the back is olive green, with blackish marks; the tail is blackish with white spots at end of lateral feathers: the wings are blackish with two white bars. He is an exciting fluttering bunch of black, yellow and white.

The female is similar to the male, but color everywhere restricted and veiled to softness and sometimes to obscurity.

The young are similar to the adults, but yellow much paler, and some of the adult Townsend Warblers' most characteristic markings are obsolete in the young birds.

Last Fall, when over in the Pebble Beach grounds, I thought I was being treated to another sight of a flock of Myrtle and Audubon Warblers, until I came close enough to hear a tinkling "wichity, wichity, wichity," when I became excited, left my friends, and followed the nervous, restless flock until I came sufficiently near to make notes that I could use.

The males had small black head-pieces; the rest of upper parts was pale greenish yellow; the under parts were yellow. The males seemed very bright and showy when I contrasted them with the plain olive brown coated females, whose heads were washed with greenish-yellow and whose under parts were a dingy yellowish-white.

It was a bright sunny day, and the well-groomed bodies fairly glistened and shimmered with greenish-yellow as they flitted from one patch of weeds to another, feeding and calling to each other in their cherry voices.

I studied them for some time, then rushed home and soon learned that they were the Pacific Yellow-Throats, one of our best known and much appreciated seed-eating Wood Warblers.

Small Army, But a Big Navy

In reply to a Carmel citizen, who wrote to Congressman E. A. Hayes, asking information as to his attitude in the matter of national military and naval preparedness, the following brief note has been received:

Your letter of the 15th instant is duly at hand and noted.

In reply thereto I have to say that I am not in favor of a large increase in the standing army, which, in my opinion, would be unnecessary and a positive detriment to the country. Our people have no thought of making war on anybody, and therefore need no standing army. I do feel, however, that we need a navy of sufficient strength to protect our coasts, though by no means of the 'preparedness" advocated by the President.

A Lincoln Wanted

Though we may not scent a crisis
In affairs of Uncle Sam,
This the very best advice is:
Let us seek an Abraham,
Seek the wise and honest ruler
Of unfailing common sense,
One whose brain becomes the cooler
As the danger grows intense.

Seek a strong and fearless leader
All may follow as their chief—
Not a petty party pleader
With electioneering brief—
Such a man we'd welcome gladly,
Such a man has soul sublime—
Yes, we need a Lincoln badly,
But we need one all the time.

Poor Lo

It is related that at the Carmelo school, in the Carmel Valley, a short time ago, the the teacher directed that Alec Panoche, a pupil, the only living descendent of a tribe of Indians which flourished in Junipero Serra's time, either take a bath or no longer attend that school.

Disciple won. But Alex choose what he regarded the lesser of the two evils. He bathed his tan-colored body in the Carmel river.

A short time after came a second order of a similar nature. Discipline won again. But this time Alec quit school.

It does beat all how the white race will persist in persecuting and pestering the noble Red man.

Exact Statement

It is pleasant to find the stickler for exact statement near and ready when a contributor to a New York contemporary is caught in the act of placing the prefix "Daniel" before Cupid as a free and easy elaboration of the title "Dan" applied to the little fellow by Shakespeare in "Love's Labor Lost." It is explained, of course, that "Dan" in this connection is a corruption of "Don," which is an archaic word coming ultimately from "dominus," master, lord. It would be fully as correct to expand "Don" into "Donald" as "Dan" into "Daniel" in this connection. — Christian Science Monitor.

The Classic February

By ELIZABETH INGRAM HUBBARD

The month just closed is the month when the climax of American birthdays is reached. After all other names have gone into the making of the pyramid, Washington and Lincoln crown the summit. Do you recall the sky picture of Lincoln, hair disheaveled by excess of midnight brooding, in the arms of Washington, whose face, serene as sunshine would calm all the fret of the time?

That picture is a wonder, for it stands as a camera sketch of a great imagination fired with patriotic zeal. February is a fitting month to chronicle the two great lights, Washington and Lincoln. "George" means a husbandman. "Abraham" signifies father of a multitude. "February" is derived from "Februa, a sacrifice of atonement."

In this month Augustus (Caesar) was named Pater patriae—Father of his country.

All the stars were called into counsel to give February its rank as a month of sacred deeds. Tnen, too, as we very well know, spring opened. All the sacred rites to Pan and Faunus took place in February. It was in this month that Romulus and remus were found and adopted by the good Faustuius and his wife and the handy wolf. The Feast of Lupercalia, which was not celebrated until the sixth century after Christ, occured in February.

This was the month when peculiar honors were paid to the graves of the dead. And in February came the swallow, the harbinger of spring. The Equeria, the chariot races instituted by Romulus to Mars, to which the god himself lent his presence, closed the events of the month.

If one were master of the tool of the carver, what a frame could he create as a setting to the two heroic faces whose birthdays are celebrated in February!

Funds to Restore Carmel Mission

At the Oakland Auditorium, on Monday evening, "The Rosary" was produced under the auspices of the Knights of Columbus. There was a large attendance. The receipts will be turned over to the fund being raised to restore the Carmel Mission.

The card party and social time, held on Monday evening at the Hotel Carmel, for the benefit of the Mission church, was a well attended and enjoyable affair.

Whist prize-winners were: Mrs. Will Hatton, Mrs. H. P. Larouette and Mr. Arthur E. Donnelly. The refreshments for the affair were donated.

—But, Oh, the Dogs!

The following communication is self-explanatory:

Carmel, Cal., March 5, 1916

Editor Pine Cone:

I have been informed that the permanent population of Carmel is about 400 persons. From my observations on your streets I am led to assume that the number of dogs is about the same. One day recently I counted twelve dogs at one time within half a block of the Post-office.

I came here to spend a few months in peace and safety, neither of which I have found because of the dog nuisance. My little girl goes for our daily mail in fear and trembling, and the nights are made hideous and sleepless by barking dogs.

Cannot something be done to remedy this state of affairs? Is there no official body to take action in the matter? I love Carmel, but Oh, the dogs! A Visitor

An Evening Hymn

The following question and comment comes from Miss Adeline D. Gray, at Los Altos:

"Twice lately I have been asked if an evening hymn has ever been written concerning Carmel. Will you make a note of the request in your paper? These glorious evenings may rouse a latent thought that needs expression."

Interesting Old Coins

Mr. J. B. Sylvester is the possessor of a number of historic pieces of money, among the number being a "Trade and Navigation" penny, dated 1814, and two 1-cent pieces dated 1834 and 1846, both a little larger than the present 25 cent coin. Another relic is a uniform button of gold worn probably in the war with England in 1812.

PINE NEEDLES

Today is Ash Wednesday the beginning of Lent. Easter occurs on April 23. There will be service at 2 o'clock this afternoon at Carmel All Saints.
